Primitive Fire Fighters.

As late as the end of the sixteenth century in London the sole method of extinguishing fires was by means of contrivances known as "hand squirts." These were usually made of brass, with a carrying capacity ranging from two to four quarts of water. The two quart "squirts" were two and a haif feet in length, one and a haif inches in diameter at their largest part gad but half an inch at the nozzle. On each side were bandles, and three men were required to manipulate a "squirt." One man on each side grasped the handle in one hand and the nozzle in the other, while the foird man worked the piston or plunger, drawing it out while the nozzle was immersed in a supply of water which filled the cylinder. The bearers then elevated the nozzle, when the other pushed in the plunger, the skill of the former being employed in directing the stream of water upon the fire. Such primitive contrivances are said to have been used during the great fire of 1666.

Quarantine Ship is Rammed by Buelahland in Hampton Roads.

CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE TO THE OLD BATTLESHIP

Collision Follows-Injuries Are Estimated to Extent of $300.

The famous old battleship James ne ramous of battleanp James, now used as the quarantine of for the Charles Cape marine pital station, was rammed and side-sably damaged at an early ryesterday morning by the masted schooner Buelahland, Baltimore, bound for southern Baltimore, bound and lumber laden

Shortly after 1:30 o'clock the captain of the Buelahland caused his ship to drift out with the tide, expecting to set sail for his destination at day break. There was little wind blowing and the Buelahland drifted fint the Jamestown, ramming her bow sprit into the starboard side of the quarantine ship. The Jamestown's gangway was torn off, her small launch completely crushed and most of the heavy two luch wire risging were carried away. The crash came with such force as to cause the two vessels to become wedged together and it required more than an hour's work to separate them. Finsily a jack and pully were resorted to and in this way the Buelahland was pulled out and made her way linto the stream. It was said that the Puelahland suffered only slight damage.

Damage to Jamestown.

Krown intil the board of survey makes its report.

Dr. MacCaffry, the assistant quarantine officer, with Mrs. MacCaffey, was spending the night on the Jamestown and the sudden crash caused considerable excitement among the crew of the quarantine ship, as well as the me on the Buelahland.

Dr. Hugh Cummins, the quarantine ship, he is making a visit to all the life-saving stations in the Cape Charles district.

Will Report Accident.

After the accident the captain of the Buelahland, whose name could not be learned, said he would make a report of the collision. A Japanese Anthem.

The majority of national anthems are not conspicuous for beauty, either of words or music. The only one composed by a musician of the very first rank is the Austrian anthem, for which Haydn is responsible. And in no country has the composition of a really great poet been adopted except in Norway, where Bjornson's stirring lines beginning "Yes, we love this country, serve as the national anthem. The Japanese have a daintily worded authem which Captain Brinkley translates as follows:

Until this grain of sand.
